ANOTHER HEAVY RAINFALL OCCURRED MONDAY EVENING

The rain of Saturday night and Sunday morning was followed Monday night by an even greater precipitation, J. G. Brown's report showing the rainfall to have amounted to 1.58 inches. The rain of Saturday night and Sunday was 1.12 inches. It now looks as though the regular summer showers had set in, although it is somewhat early, the summer rains usually beginning the latter part of May or the forepart of June. The rain Monday night was a perfect deluge for a time, accompanied by light hail in some vicinities, and there was the usual thunder and lightning of the summer shower. The roads were washed clean and smooth and the earth was well saturated.

COUNCIL PASSED BOND SALE ORDINANCES TO THEIR THIRD READINGS

AUTHORIZE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS TO SELL $100,000 TO BRYAN & CO. AND $50,000 TO MERCHANTS BANK.

At Monday night's meeting of the city council ordinances authorizing the sale of Daytona's 1914 issue of sewerage and drainage bonds to Bryan & Co., of Jacksonville, and to the Merchants bank, of Daytona, were passed on first and second readings. Ordinance "B," relating to the Bryan & Co., deal received the votes of Councilmen Stevens and Mills, while Councilmen Conrad and Gougarty opposed it, making a tie, which was broken by Acting President Klock who voted for the ordinance. Councilman Burdick and President Schmidt were not present.

Ordinance "A," authorizing the sale of $50,000 of the bonds to the Merchants bank received the votes of Councilmen Stevens, Mills and Gougarty, Councilman Conrad voting nay.

Both ordinances will come up for final passage at the next regular meeting of the council. The stipulated price at which both blocks of bonds are to be sold is, of course, par. Actually, however, the $100,000 worth which Bryan & Co. propose to take will, if the sale is ratified by the council, net the city $95,000, and the $50,000 worth the Merchants bank offers to purchase will net $47,000, making a total sum of $142,000 the city would receive for $150,000 worth of five per cent. forty-year bonds. It is contended by advocates of the sales that the city cannot reasonably expect to do better than this, considering the peculiar financial conditions which are now or may be later faced by the financial world. There are those, too, who quite as vigorously oppose the sales upon the terms named.

Bryan & Co. is a contracting firm with which the board of public works some time ago (after the deal with Spitzer & Co., of Toledo, O., fell through), commenced negotiations for the sale of part of the bonds and for the construction of the sewerage and drainage system. A member of the Jacksonville firm, Mr. Bryan, was present at the meeting last night. He verbally presented to the council an outline of his position, and made a favorable impression.

Councilman Gougarty gave notice that he will, at the next regular meeting of the council, introduce an ordinance regulating the operation of "jitney" 'busses in the city of Daytona. A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the office of City Clerk Porter.

Communications from several property owners who complained that their 1915 taxes are too high were filed for further consideration and investigation.

The street committee was authorized to purchase, when needed, a sprinkling cart for use on the city streets.

REPUBLICANS STEP UP FOR THEIR "MEDICINE"

INDIANAPOLIS, May 11. — Judge Anderson who so unfeelingly sentenced Mayor Roberts and his political cohorts who stuffed the ballot boxes in Terre Haute district to from one year for the chief of police to six years for the mayor, will today take up and pass sentence upon Roy E. Shattuck, republican candidate for congress from the Fifth district and the other republicans indicted. The "afflicted" have grave apprehensions.

MEMBERS BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS MUST GIVE $10,000 BONDS

Mayor Henry T. Titus, during the meeting of the city council, Monday night, arose and demanded that each member of the board of public works be required to comply with the municipal law which provides that they shall guarantee the faithful performance of their duty by giving indemnity bonds to the city they serve.

A resolution, offered by Councilman Mills and seconded by Councilman Conrad, requesting each member of the board of public works to give bond in the sum of $10,000 was unanimously adopted. E. M. Condit, secretary of the board of public works, in speaking for that body stated that no member of it objected to giving bond but did not think it necessary or required by the municipal law.

An ordinance passed and approved March 30, 1909, specifically states that the members of the board of public works shall give bonds "for the faithful performance of their duty," and the proper disbursement of all moneys which "may come into their hands by virtue of their offices." This ordinance has not been repealed, but no member of the board of public works has been under bond in several years.

DR. G. A. KLOCK GAVE SPLENDID ADDRESS AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The services at the First Christian church were largely attended on Sunday evening, at which time Dr. Klock gave a splendid address on "Keeping One's Health." Among the special things mentioned were food, sleep, work and habit. He showed that most people who are "worked to death," are people who spend too much of their time in pleasures not wisely directed, and by keeping late hours, thus making them unfit for real work. He admonished all to form regular habits as regards food, sleep and work.

At the conclusion of Dr. Klock's address, the minister, S. L. Jackson, took the divisions of the doctor's address and applied them to keeping one's health spiritually. At the close of the minister's talk, the invitation was given and one young lady went forward to confess her faith in Christ.

The address by Dr. Klock is the first in the summer series to be given on the second Sunday evening in each month. Some business or professional man will occupy the pulpit discussing themes of vital interest to the people of the community.

WILL ATTEND MEETING OF STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY

Several physicians in this city and vicinity will go to DeLand this week to attend the session in that city, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, of the State Medical society. Among those who have signified their intention of attending the convention are Dr. F. J. Walter, Dr. H. L. Merryday, Dr. J. E. Rawlings, Dr. C. C. Bohannon and Dr. J. P. Esch. The state society will be entertained by the Volusia County Medical society.

BIG LOCAL CHARITY BENEFIT SHOW READY FOR FRIDAY EVENING

Mr. Gilmain is delighted with the prospects for his final show of the season to take place Friday evening, May 14th, for the benefit of local charities. Rehearsals are progressing in true professional style and the cast is now complete for both plays. The names have been given heretofore through these columns and the characters in the last play, in two acts, filled with music, includes the following well known local players: Mrs. Jean Neville, Misses Alyce Green, Mary Stewart, Nina Phillips (a perfect scream, right from Titusville) Leota Coburn and Julia Michael; W. B. Shaw, juvenile lead, with songs galore, Billy Conrad, comedy part, introducing a new feature dance with Miss Alyce Green; Maurice Niver, a country rube, Donald Morgan, Messrs. Jones and Harding, Harry Erickson, Lew Smith, John and Owen Sullivan, and others. This play deals with college life and the star part is played by a young man masquerading as a chaperone, called the "Fascinating Widow'er." He assumes this character to find out the sort of a fellow (one of the college boys) his sister is engaged to, and he accomplishes his purpose and finds out that he is true-blue; he discards his make-up and discloses his identity at the finish, in the character of Tom Philbrook.

It is fun from beginning to end and also embraces some of the most catchy musical hits of the day, among them the "Fascinating Widow," Julian Eltynge's great success; "Love is like a Butterfly," and "You're Just a Little Bit Better," from the "Passing Show of 1914," and last, but not least, "You're Just the Girl I'm Looking For," which was omitted from the last show and will be made a feature next Friday evening, with Miss Hazel Ferris and W. B. Shaw. Another feature song will be "I Love You, California," solo Miss Coburn, with a large chorus.

Mrs. Jean Neville will appear between the acts in a new sketch entitled "Pauline Pavlona."

Tickets are selling rapidly at Hankins' drug store. Don't miss this last show by local talent, and a farewell to Mr. Gilmain.

FLORIDA'S PROGRESS TOWARDS STATEWIDE VITAL STATISTICS

The state board of health for Florida has just sent to the newspapers of the state a circular letter, from which the following is an extract:

"The proposed model vital statistics law is now before the house of representatives, having already passed the senate, and it is hoped and believed it will soon be taken up and enacted without changes which might impair the effectiveness of the measure.

"When the state-wide measure becomes law, the present policy is to favor the registration of births and deaths within incorporated cities and towns through their ordinances and municipal registrars wherever and whenever local legislation is adequate and effectively enforced. For it is self-evident that favorable local sentiment actively expressed is the best possible guarantee for the enforcement of any law.

"Therefore, every municipality which has not yet passed the model ordinance, should do so at the earliest possible date; and when and where adequate ordinances are in effect, they should be enforced without fear or favor that this office may accept such collections without question.

"It is also hoped and expected that registrars in municipalities may also act as registrars for the surrounding rural districts, of which such municipalities are the easily reached centers. This will help to simplify the system, lessen the number of registrars and centralize collections for a large proportion of Florida's population in the most easily reached localities and with officials already familiar with the practice."

By JEAN DICKERSON.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Doctor Drayton dismissed his last patient just as the telephone at his elbow rang sharply. His sister's voice came over the wire, frightened with a burden of important news.

"I know you are dreadfully busy, Frederick," she apologized, "but Mrs. Weeks has just told me the most agitating thing—it's about Archer—"

"Spare me, Hannah," said the doctor, wearily. "I don't just understand why it is that people delight in acquainting me with news of my son's delinquencies; as a matter of fact, Archer has overcome any tendency to wildness and has settled down to hard work. I have hopes of his becoming something of a lawyer. Now, if you will excuse me—what?—eh? An actress? Well, boys will be boys—and er—well, good-by!" He banged the telephone back on the desk and frowned at the picture of his handsome only son that looked down from the wall.

"Hannah says a very common actress! That doesn't sound like Archer—but what can I do? I can refuse to give my consent to his marriage with the woman and estrange myself from my lad! What is that, Harris, a call?"

"Yes, sir," said the attendant. "Emergency case—the lady was knocked down by an automobile and they brought her in here. I had her taken to the private room."

"That is right, Harris. I will come at once."

The physician slipped into a fresh white coat and, opening a door in one corner of the office found himself in a small room fitted for emergency cases.

On the narrow white bed was the slender form of a young woman. Miss Smith, the nurse, was removing the black broadcloth costume with quick, deft fingers.

"Badly hurt, Miss Smith?" asked the doctor.

"A broken arm, I think, and I am afraid of concussion," she said in a low tone.

The doctor leaned over the lovely unconscious face of the girl and made a rapid examination.

"It may be concussion, but I think it is only shock. The arm is fractured—send Harris in."

Two hours later Doctor Drayton retired from the sick room satisfied that the unknown patient would recover.

"You will, of course, send her to a hospital," suggested Miss Smith.

"I think not," hesitated the doctor. He felt very tenderly toward the young thing lying there on the bed.

A week slipped by, and still the sick room was occupied, much to the unspoken amazement of Miss Smith.

One day the patient opened lovely hazel eyes and smiled at the nurse.

"Where am I?" she asked faintly.

"At Doctor Drayton's house," replied Miss Smith primly.

The eyes closed again and a faint flush stole over the pale face. "Please tell me what has happened," she murmured.

Miss Smith told her in a few words of the automobile accident in front of the doctor's office. "We have been unable to learn your name," she suggested.

"Alice," murmured the girl, and went off to sleep.

"Have you discovered her name?" asked the doctor on his next visit to the sick room.

"Merely that it is Alice—she seems disinclined to talk—it's rather a mysterious case, Doctor Drayton. Perhaps she has no home—no people."

"I wish she hadn't—I would adopt her in a minute," said the doctor gruffly as he left the room.

He found his son smoking in the library.

"Hullo, dad, rushed as usual, I suppose?" said the young man as he returned his father's hand grip.

"Yes—and I have rather a puzzling private case in the house."

A tap came at the door and Harris poked a disturbed face inside.

"I beg your pardon, Doctor Drayton, But Miss Smith wants you to come once—the patient insists on leaving the house and has demanded her clothes, and Miss Smith doesn't know what to do."

Archer followed his father into the hall.

Near the front door stood Miss Smith, her arms stretched across the doorway barring the departure of the young patient who had donned her street clothes and was standing pale and silent before the nurse.

"Madame!" expostulated Doctor Drayton.

"Alice!" cried Archer sharply.

In a moment Alice was in his arms and hiding a blushing disturbed face on his broad shoulder.

Record Diamond Drill.

The largest diamond drill core ever cut has just been presented to Lehigh university. It was cut in the Marcy vein, at the Maltby colliery, Scranton. The specimen is a core of an 11-inch diamond drill and the core is 10 inches in diameter. The object of the drilling was to drain some old workings at the Maltby colliery. A barrier of 183 feet had to be penetrated before the water, which had a head of 176 feet, could be tapped. The core shows the middle rock of the Marcy vein.

French Girl Keeps Soldiers From German Clutches.

By Dint of All Sorts of Courageous Ruses She Feeds and Conceals Englishmen While Teutons Occupy Place.

Paris.—The invaders would not have been so charitably disposed to a French girl had they known that for three weeks by dint of all sorts of courageous ruses she had been feeding, concealing, and keeping from their clutches ten English soldiers.

She was a servant in a girl's boarding school. When the war broke out the pupils all returned to their homes, and she was left alone, for her only companion was an old deaf and partially paralyzed woman. When the Germans entered the town they went through the girls' school from attic to basement, collecting all the linen bedding they could lay their hands on. For some reason or other they did not install their wounded in the main building, but in the chapter annex.

These wounded the girl tended with the utmost devotion, in the first place, because she is tender-hearted, and in the second, because she had every reason to desire to stand well with the invaders. For her conscience was quite clear. She knew that down in the grotto at the end of the school gardens she had concealed ten "Tommies," who had come, hungry, footsore and worn out just one hour before the Germans.

"They will be here in a moment," the English officer had said, not wishing to put the girl in danger.

"Never mind," she said, "I'll hide you somewhere, and afterwards we shall see." So she took them to the grotto. But the quarters were narrow, damp and intensely uncomfortable. Her heart bled for her proteges. Then she had an idea, the very daring of which was to insure its success. She installed her ten "Tommies" in the unoccupied top floor of the school itself. Then came the question of the commissariat. At first she gave up her own ration to her ten refugees—but that was not enough among so many. So she collected from her friends and relatives in the village here a piece of bread and there a vegetable.

When the Germans, seeing her suspiciously laden basket, asked her for whom were all these provisions, she would answer, "For your wounded in the chapel." Better still, she appointed herself cook for the German ambulance, and in this capacity was able to pick up all sorts of broken victuals, so that her English were in no danger of starving.

But English soldiers do not live by food alone—they like their tobacco. Now, according to the regulations of the invaders, each inhabitant of the place had the right to buy two sous' worth of tobacco a day. She found a way to evade this regulation and to keep her ten in smokables. She organized an army of boys, who ten or twenty times a day would purchase at different shops the meager pennyworth.

But there was always the danger that the hiding place of the ten might be discovered by some German. Fortunately, their dormitory communicated by trap-doors with the ground floor of the building, and precisely with a room on that ground floor which gave on the garden. So she procured a long rope, with which she advised her prisoners to practice a sort of fire-drill. She was enthusiastic over the results.

"Just imagine," she said to her interviewer, "that my Englishmen after a few attempts were able, the whole ten of them, to strap up their haversacks, get ready for all eventualities, and slide down the rope noiselessly in less than five minutes."

But these desperate measures were not necessary. The Germans temporarily evacuated the place, and the ten English soldiers were able to regain the allied lines in safety. They have all given her their names and addresses, and sworn that she must come to England when the war is over, where they promise her a royal welcome. One of the grateful ten is a nobleman, and a relative of King George—Lord Smith is the name given, but never mind! The girl left the town only when the Germans were about to re-enter it, and after the town had been subjected to a fierce bombardment for many days.

FIRED SHOTS IN HIS SLEEP

Roumanian Dreams of Chicken Thieves and Opens Up With a Gun.

Kansas City.—Joseph Sharder, a Roumanian, was discharged in the North side court as the result of an unusual story of somnambulism. He was arrested by Patrolman P. L. Savidge for discharging firearms near his home.

Sharder told Judge Charles Clark that he had been asleep and dreamed someone was stealing his chickens. He said he took his revolver from a drawer and began shooting at the chicken thieves and that he was not awakened until the officer arrested him, although the shots he fired awakened the entire neighborhood.

Sharder had to be overpowered by the patrolman before he could be disarmed.

ONE GIRL'S [illegible]

Mrs. Jones while [illegible] stitches in the [illegible] sewing, suddenly paused [illegible] out the window.

"It's a shame," she exclaimed to the other women, "that Margaret doesn't get married! Here she is, getting on toward twenty-five or twenty-six, and actually if you ever see her with a man it's a surprise!"

"Yes," eagerly assented Mrs. Brophy, hastening to the window and looking out carefully from behind the curtain. "I've often said so to my husband. There she is—pretty, with attractive manners and capable. Why, she'd make any man a good wife—a wife he could be proud of! I just can't understand it! What are the men thinking of to let her grow into a regular old maid?"

"But that's the way the world's growing!" commented sad Mrs. Grimson, plaintively. "You see it everywhere. The men don't want wives to take care of, and the women are too particular about the men!"

"Yes, that's just it!" declared Mrs. Burnham. "Girls are too high and mighty! Why, they want a whole establishment to begin with, and the poor men are frightened to death! If these girls would make up their minds to take the men who ask them, 'for better or worse,' not forgetting the 'poorer' with the 'richer,' they'd all be married happily in no time.

"But they'll get gray headed and unattractive and set in their ways. I can notice Margaret getting rather set—haven't you noticed it? But they'll realize too late! And, perhaps, they'll be a lesson to the coming generation!"

Just then Mrs. Roth entered, much excited. "What do you suppose?" she exclaimed, breathlessly. "I've just met Margaret on the corner and she's got a diamond ring! She didn't want to talk about it, but I found out that she's known him a long time, and they're going to be married soon! I tried to get something out of her about him, but all I could learn is that he's a young city man whom she met at school. Actually, I'm dumfounded!" She collapsed into a seat and sighed deeply as she proceeded to arrange her sewing.

"Well, did you ever!" was Mrs. Brophy's brief comment.

Mrs. Jones shook her head. "Poor girl!" she murmured. "There she is, earning her own living and making good money, too, and going to give it all up for the sake of some man she probably hardly knows!"

"Yes, but it's like girls!" exclaimed Mrs. Burnham, impatiently. "They're willing to take up with anyone, just to get married. She'll find it's a very different thing, slaving around a house all day and taking care of children, from the easy life she's been leading. She thinks she's going to live amid roses from the time she gets married—but she'll wake up! It's rather sad, isn't it?" And she gazed dreamily out the window.

Mrs. Gray sat silent, meditating. "Think of giving up the freedom of girlhood!" she finally said. "She'll miss her parties and dances, her freedom to go and come as she pleases, and her right to buy what she wants with the money she's earned herself. It's different from what it was when girls were dependent on their fathers and marriage meant only the change of the person who attended to money matters. To give up one's independence for the sake of a man—especially a man one barely knows—is positively foolhardy! Margaret always seemed such a nice, sensible girl, too. I'm surprised."

"Isn't it strange how crazy girls are to get married?" declared Mrs. Roth. "They don't realize when they're well off until it's too late! And you can't tell them anything! They're just forced to gain their own experience—and repent too late!"

"There she goes!" exclaimed Mrs. Gray. And they all hastened to the window.

"She looks a little worried, don't you think?" remarked Mrs. Jones.

"It's a shame! There's not a man good enough for a girl like Margaret!" declared Mrs. Burnham. "Oh, she's coming in here!"

They all hurried to the door.

"Oh, Margaret, congratulations! Congratulations!"

"We've suspected it right along."

"When is it going to be?"

"Who's the lucky man?"

"I'm so glad—after all these years of business, it'll be such a relief!"

And Margaret was ushered in, blushing happily.—Chicago Daily News.

Ready for Further Orders.

Captain Lawson was owner and pilot of the New Orleans. The Mississippi broke its banks. There were miles of rushing waters, says the National Monthly. Only an experienced eye could tell the channel. Captain Lawson had been at the wheel for 36 hours. He was exhausted from loss of sleep. Rastus, a colored pilot aboard, was called to the captain.

"Do you see that north star?" asked the captain.

"Yas, boss."

"Well, hold this boat on that star."

"Yas, boss."

When the captain awoke an honr later his boat was winding in and out among the trees. The captain was indignant. "I thought I told you to hold this boat on the north star?" he cried.

"Lor', boss, we done passed dat star long ergo."

WHILE the transient population of Daytona and the peninsula cities has dwindled to a few score souls, there are still several thousand permanent residents here. And they have to buy food and clothing and shoes and summer comforts and amusements.

The DAILY NEWS goes into the homes of several hundred families of these people every day except Sunday. And, Mr. Merchant, many of those people expect you to talk to them, through the DAILY NEWS, about the things you want them to buy---and things they WANT to buy.

THE EUROPEAN WAR

THE ALLIES' VIEW
By Albert W. Bryce.

The French estimate of the distance from which the Germans dropped shells at Dunkirk is twenty-three miles. Fire at such a range has long been a topic of popular interest as a possibility. It is now a fact.

Traveling swifter than a rifle ball, a shot fired at such range is nearly two minutes on its way. At 45 degrees elevation it rises more than two miles above the loftiest mountain, higher than man can mount in a balloon and live, before it begins to descend.

The great guns of warships cannot be elevated more than 15 degrees. This one reason why the Allies landed armies at the Dardanelles. Plunging fire from batteries at closer range should be more effective against Turkish forts than the big guns of the Queen Elizabeth. No warship could shell New York from a distance at sea equalling the range of land artillery.

Messrs. John and Owen Sullivan have good speaking parts in the play Friday evening.

THE GERMAN VIEW
By Hugo von Kleist

It is accepted that the rules of international law do not forbid sales of arms and ammunition. The rights of German and Austrian governments are not involved at all.

Germany does not even protest our right to sell arms and ammunition; although she has expressed her surprise at our enormous sales of ammunition to the Allies and our failure at the same time to insist upon our undoubted right to deliver food-stuffs to the civilians of Germany and Austria-Hungary. The question, however, is essentially one of our own self-respect. What precedents have we in our own history to guide us

During our late difficulties with Mexico our government prevented a German merchantman from delivering arms and ammunition to one of the Mexican factions. The German ship was clearly within her rights; but she yielded to our desire. What was the foundation for action? Plainly our government did not sympathize with the particular consignee. We objected to giving aid to Huerta from any source. We exercised a preference between two belligerent factions even to the extent of interfering with the rights of another power. By the same rule we cannot now insist upon the right to sell arms to the Allies, and at the same time escape the suspicion before the world and before our own people that we are exercising a preference in favor of one and against another friendly power.

BURIED NEGRO DOCTOR WHO RECENTLY CAME TO MDIWAY

The remains of S. H. Broome, the colored physician who died at Midway, Saturday night, were buried in Mt. Ararat cemetery for negroes, Monday afternoon.

Broome had been at Midway only about a month, and no one there seems to know anything about his past history, except that he had been a sort of "rolling stone" and was addicted to the drink habit: but during the short time he spent in Midway he established an enviable reputation among the negroes, who regarded him as an unusually skillful doctor, for one of his race. Several days before he died, Broome commenced drinking heavily, and it is probable that his death was due to alchoholic poisoning.

is invariably followed by the discovery that the bills for ribbons are much less than before. A large corporation recently found that its ribbon expense was cut in two. This is not an accident. It is the result of the mechanical construction that makes the L. C. Smith & Bros. cheapest to maintain.

The ball bearings give light touch and eliminate pounding impact. The ribbon is actuated by the carriage, not the typebar. The ribbon mechanism is automatic, so that the ribbon reverses at the instant the end is reached and without added strain.

Low ribbon cost, low cost of maintenance and the highest efficiency—these are guaranteed to L. C. Smith & Bros. users.

A MATTER OF INTEREST TO THE SCHOOL CHILDREN

Mr. Gilmain, realizing that the school children of Daytona will want to see their teachers in the various roles that they are to assume next Friday evening, offers them the best seats at 50c. to adults and 25c. to the children. Go to Hankins' drug store and give them a half ticket or 25c. and you will receive a coupon good for the 50c. seats.

Just a Hint.

"Now, men," said the genial employer, as his hands clustered round him at the breakfast hour, "this is the election, and I hope you are all going to vote. Now, I'm not going to tell who my favorite candidate is. Every one of you is to be entirely free to vote as he thinks best. But do you see that big barrel of beer over in the corner? Well, that barrel won't be opened unless X—— gets in."

Almost Perfect Ideal.

A faithful friend of all that is best, a brave sufferer from incurable burdens, in a private letter sends this confession, which we commend to those more favored of circumstances, less consecrated in the center-stances of life: "My ideal is every day to spread a little truth, a little kindness, a little beauty, but alas, how often I fail!"

COLORED EXCURSION TO PONCE PARK MONDAY

The local lodge of American Woodmen, colored, of Waycross, gave an excursion to Ponce Park on board the steamer Constitution, Monday, which was fairly well attended by members and their friends. The boat left the city dock between 9:00 and 10:00 o'clock in the morning and returned in the late evening. The excursion was in charge of Gus Moore, steward of the Halifax River Yacht club and among the excursionists was noted Frank Noid, a well-known character about town popularly known as "Catfish Frank," who, it is said had not indulged in an excursion of this kind for more than 20 years.

Bad Habit to Cultivate.

The habit of dissipating every serious thought by a suggestion of agreeable sensations is as fatal to happiness as to virtue; for when amusement is uniformly substituted for objects of moral and mental interest, we lose all that elevates our enjoyments above the scale of childish pleasures.—Anna Maria Porter.

Best Household Gods.

The man of high descent may love the halls and lands of his inheritance as a part of himself, as trophies of his birth and power; the poor man's attachment to the tenement he holds, which strangers have held before and may tomorrow occupy again, has a worthier root, stuck deep into a purer soil. His household gods are of flesh and blood, with no alloy of silver, gold or precious stones.—Charles Dickens.

Delicate Hint.

Fred, four years old, and his mother were visiting a friend. Invariably when they came the hostess would have some cake and coffee for them. This time she did not make anything. Fred, after waiting some time, became impatient and anxious. Wishing to remind her as delicately as possible, he said as he went into the other room: "I'll play the piano. Call me when the coffee's ready."

Why He Hadn't.

"Why is it," asked the poet's wife's neighbor, "that your husband never dedicates any of his books to you? Nearly every poet who has a wife dedicates at least one book to her." "Dear me! I'm glad you called my attention to it. I must look at his books some time, and if what you say is true I shall never forgive him."—Tit-Bits.

One of the biggest jobs of the British army is that of the quartermaster general, whose duty it is to see that every soldier in service is provided with all necessities of war, from a shoestring to big trench shelters. Sir J. S. Cowans, who fills this highly important position, is the third military member of the army council and has been working ceaselessly to supply the provisions, clothing, shelter, and, in fact, everything used by the three to four million soldiers in the field.

USING DRAG AND SCRAPER TO IMPROVE STREET SURFACE

Street Commissioner James Rix began some street work Monday which promises improvement of the surface of Beach street and others of the city streets and avenues if it comes up to his expectations. This work consists of the use of a drag, or harrow, in connection with the road scraper. The scraper alone does not cut deep enough or put the surface in a condition for a reunion of the materials as will the use of the drag. In many places the streets are already too high and where this is the case the material cut loose by drag and scraper is removed to some other portion of the street where it will be of advantage.

Where He Came In.

A witty barrister, says an English paper, who did not object to a joke at his own expense, was asked, on returning from circuit, how he had got on. "Well," was the reply, "I saved the lives of two or three prisoners." "Then you defended them for murder?" "No," was the rejoinder, "I prosecuted them for it."

Cretinism Made Curable.

Study of the functions of the thyroid gland in animals has shown how this class of idiots can be cured. Formerly they were hopeless and remained through life semi-imbeciles. Now extract of sheep's thyroid is given to them and the perverted growth and mental dullness are checked and the children become normal.

Wanted "Nice, Dirty Mother."

When Edward was five years old he played with a boy named Adolph. One muddy day they tried to run across my clean kitchen floor to get a ball. I chased them out and afterwards heard them talking out on the porch. Adolph said, "My mother doesn't care if I run across the kitchen floor." After a long silence I heard Edward say, "I wish I had a nice, dirty mother like yours."—Exchange.

Signs of Pain.

It is difficult to estimate the degree of pain, but there are certain signs of suffering which are unmistakable—the pinched features, the knotted brow, the rolling eyes with widely dilated pupils, the ashen countenance, the cool and clammy skin, the thready pulse, the increased blood pressure, the hands alternately clenched and opened, the cries and groans and the bodily contortions. All these present a definite picture with which every experienced physician or nurse is familiar.
